

Cosmic-Lab. Probing globular cluster internal dynamics: radial velocity dispersion and rotation profiles of 30 Galactic globular clusters

This release includes about 5400 spectra of individual stars in 30 Galactic globular clusters (GGCs) acquired within the ESO Large Program 193.D-0232, by using the K-band Multi Object Spectrograph (KMOS) mounted at the UT1 telescope of the ESO-VLT. We have used the YJ grating that provides spectra in the wavelength range 1.0-1.35  $\mu\text{m}$  (10000-13500  $\text{\AA}$ ), with a resolution  $R \sim 3400$ . By using the KMOS Arm Allocator (KARMA), we allocated the available 24 IFUs to sample giant stars brighter than 1-2 magnitudes below the horizontal branch level (typically  $J < 14$ ), attaining a signal-to-noise ratio  $\text{SNR} \geq 40$  with the adopted exposure times. To reach enough number statistics, in each selected cluster we performed from 4 to 14 pointings. The final aim of the project is to measure the line-of-sight velocity of a statistically significant sample of individual stars in 30 GGCs, from which determining the velocity dispersion and rotation profiles of the target clusters.

Release Content

In the Appendix of this document, the file GC_KMOS_DATA_summary.pdf contains 30 tables, one for each cluster, in which the details of each pointing are reported: pointing name, J2000 coordinates, spectral range, resolution, exposure time, observing date, SNR range, and the number of available spectra.

The KMOS observations have been carried out in the YJ grating (1.0-1.35  $\mu\text{m}$ ), with a spectral resolution  $R \sim 3400$ .

The target stars have been selected in the brightest portion ( $J < 14$ , or  $K < 12-13$ ) of the near-IR colour-magnitude diagram (CMD) of each cluster. They typically belong to the red giant branch (RGB), asymptotic giant branch (AGB) and horizontal branch (HB).

The observing strategy was designed to sample the largest number of stars in the central region of each cluster. To obtain spectra with a reasonably good SNR ( $\geq 40$ ), the targets have been divided in luminosity groups and the corresponding OBs been organized in groups of different exposure times (typically 180, 360 and 600 s).

The average number of pointings for each cluster is 7-8, (ranging from 4-5 for the smallest GCs, up to 14 pointings for the largest ones). Considering the entire sample of 30 GGCs, here we release 5397 spectra for a total size of 211 MB (megabytes).

Release Notes

The data have been reduced by using the ESO KMOS pipeline (version 1.3.5), which performs the reconstruction of the cube and the wavelength calibration.

The spectral reference system is Topocentric and the wavelengths are calibrated in dry Air.

Data Reduction and Calibration

The spectroscopic targets have been selected from near-IR catalogues (Ferraro et al. 2000; Valenti et al. 2004, 2007), on the basis of their positions in the CMDs.

Also ACS-HST data (Sarajedini et al. 2007) in the F606W and F814W bands have been used to complement the target list with stars that were not present in the IR catalogue.

The astrometric reference system of the observed stars has been calibrated in the 2MASS system.

For each IFU the spectrum has been extracted from “the brightest spaxel” around the star centroid previously determined.

Files Types

We release 5397 spectra in fits format relative to the stars observed in 30 Galactic Globular Clusters. In the following the adopted spectrum naming convention:

“eso_(cluster name)_(star ID)_br(group)_x(X_spaxel)_y(Y_spaxel).fits”

(cluster name) is the name of the cluster: example ngc104

(star ID) is the ID of the star in our photometric catalog

(group) refers to the number of the pointing during which the star was observed

(X_spaxel) is the X coordinates of the spaxel of the cube from which the spectrum was extracted.

(Y_spaxel) is the Y coordinates of the spaxel of the cube from which the spectrum was extracted.

The identification of the X and Y coordinates of the spaxel was done by visual inspection of each cube and selecting the spaxel corresponding to the centroid of the target star, usually corresponding to the highest number of counts (i.e., the spaxel in which the highest signal is reached).

Thus the file eso_ngc104_1050240_br1_x8_y8.fits contains the KMOS spectrum of star 1050240 in the cluster NGC 104, observed in the first pointing performed in that cluster (br1), extracted from the spaxel with coordinates (8,8).

The file KMOS_observedstars.pdf lists:

- (1) the fits file name of the star spectrum,
- (2) star ID
- (3) RA
- (4) Dec
- (5) V magnitude
- (6) J magnitude
- (7) K magnitude

for all the observed stars.

The file GC_KMOS_DATA_summary.pdf (in the Appendix), for each cluster, lists:

- (1) the name of the OB that executed each pointing (as can be found in the ESO Archive),
- (2) the coordinates of the pointing,
- (3) date of execution,
- (4) exposure time,
- (5) spectral resolution,
- (6) wavelength range,
- (7) Signal to Noise Ratio,
- (8) Number of stars observed in each pointing.

In the final part of each section devoted to each cluster, when needed, we added a note (“Correspondence for spectra”). This note provides information to link the name of the OB available in the ESO Archive to the name of the fits file released here (in the cases where the two names are different). In fact, the OB name reports a code (example “FAINT”, “INTER”, “BRI”, “BRIBRI”) which indicate the luminosity group at which the target belongs (FAINT sample, BRIGHT sample, etc). Thus, in the “correspondence for spectra” note we indicate the correspondence between the spectrum name and the parent OB name (for example: br(n) → FAINT1, br(n+1) → FAINT2, etc.).
